DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. The claims are directed toward non-functional, descriptive material that is a mere arrangement of data and as such, are non-statutory (see MPEP 2106.01).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US PAT 5,685,786 to Dudley.

As to claim 1, Dudley discloses a system having information related to playing a particular golf course (title) having information relating to terms and symbols for playing a selected hole (col 11, lines 7-15). Dudley does not, however, teach the matter as being printed on planar pages. The examiner takes Official Notice that printed guides to golf courses are old and well known in the art (such as so-called "yardage-guides" that tell distance from the tee box to landmarks and from landmarks to other landmarks, such as a water hazard, or to the green) and many golf-courses' score sheets include a map of the course on the reverse. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide the information on planar sheets to avoid the cost of a computer in every golf cart.

As to claim 2, it is old and well known in the art to provide golf-club information, therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide golf-club information to increase player enjoyment (for instance, suggesting irons on a very narrow hole where using a driver could result in a ball going out of bounds).

As to claim 3, the symbols include items on the hole (landmarks, as discussed) but are not disclosed as being sand traps, water hazards or trees. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to include water hazards, trees and sand traps as these are important landmarks on a golf hole.

As to claim 4, the yardage would be included no matter the shot, thus meeting the limitations as claimed.

As to claim 5, it is old and well known to include a section for player comments on a printed golf score card (such as for number of strokes, number of strokes to the green, number of fairways hit and for witnessing the score card). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide a section for comments so as to allow for comments.

As to claims 6 and 7, the actual number of pages and what is printed on each page would be a matter of obvious design choice for aesthetic purposes. Adding green information such as speed and slope would be obvious as these are old and well known as being important for accurate putting.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. US PAT 6,517,353 to Jones discloses another golf course related, pictorial tour with landmarks and other relevant information therein.
